BYU vs. Utah game ignites vandalism

By HILARY ROSS Universe Staff Writer

With the BYU-University of Utah football game right around the corner, school spirit is raging, but so is vandalism. Each year University Police take extra precautions to prevent vandalism during the week of the annual football event. Precautions include covering target areas with plastic and having volunteers guard them. Volunteers from BYUSA, Intercollegiate Knights, Radio Club and the ROTC spend their nights standing watch at various locations around campus. "The volunteers don't try and accost anybody or anything," said Bill Pray, manager of records and communications for the University Police. "If they observe anything suspicious, they phone the police and we send people out to take care of the problem. A call from one volunteer guarding the cougar in front of Cougar Stadium prevented major damage from a vandal who covered the statue with red paint early Monday morning. The damage was minimal because the student acted quickly to get people to clean up the paint. The only real damage was the time needed to clean the statue.

Along with the cougar, favorite target areas include the 'Y,' the Carillon Bell Tower and campus entrance

"A lot of excitement builds up throughout the week," said Steve Yamamoto, a junior from Salt Lake City majoring in international business. "Vandalizing the rival's school is just another way of extending the competitive spirit."

Vandalism during the game itself is usually minimal.

"(It) is not a constant thing — we may get one attempt a year related to the game," Pray said. "When (vandals) have been successful, the damage has been minor."

Anyone caught vandalizing can be charged with anything ranging from a Class B misdemeanor to a second degree felony, depending on the magnitude of the resulting damage.

Usually vandals are just cited and released, but they still have to pay for damages and make a court appear-

"The unfortunate thing is that someone could get a police record from participating in a college prank," Pray said. "The record could have many negative impacts for the student, including any opportunities they have for employment in the

Septuplets survive despite tough odds

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — An Iowa seamstress gave birth to four boys and three girls Wednesday, listening intently as doctors told her the condition and sex of each child. It was only the second set of septuplets known to be born alive.

Bobbi McCaughey's septuplets, born two months early by Caesarean section, weighed from 2 pounds, 5 ounces to 3 pounds, 4 ounces. A medical team of 40 specialists helped with the delivery. All seven were in serious condition.

"All the babies are so well-grown, so well-developed, it just strikes me as a miracle," said Dr. Paula Mahone, who helped perform the delivery at Iowa Methodist Medical

It was only the second such birth in the United States. There are no known surviving sets of septuplets in the world.

The first baby — also the heaviest - was nicknamed "Hercules" because he "held all the others up" in a pyramid formation in the womb, Mahone said.

Kenneth Robert was born at 12:48 p.m. weighing 3 pounds, 4 ounces. Alexis May came next at 12:49, weighing 2 pounds, 11 ounces, followed by Natalie Sue, 12:50, 2 pounds, 10 ounces; Kelsey Ann, 12:51, 2 pounds, 5 ounces; Brandon James, 12:52, 3 pounds, 3 ounces; Nathanial Roy, 12:53, 2 pounds, 14 ounces; and Joel Steven, 12:54, 2 pounds, 15 ounces.

Joel was initially listed in critical condition but was later upgraded to serious. All of the babies were on ventilators.

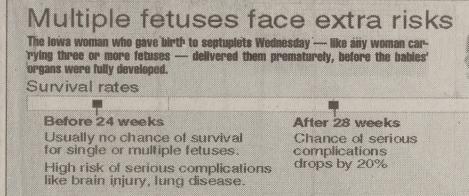

"It is not at all unusual for babies delivered at this stage of pregnancy to be in critical condition," said Dr. David Alexander, medical director of Blank Children's Hospital, where the infants will be cared for. He said premature babies often need help

Mrs. McCaughey, 29, gained 25 pounds during the pregnancy, or just 5 pounds more than the babies

"You have to take into account she has been in bed for a very long time and lost muscle mass," Mahone said. Mrs. McCaughey was given an epidural anesthetic and was alert during the delivery. "As we delivered each baby and saw the size of the babies and how vigorous they were, we were very, very happy," Mahone said.

Although mortality rates rose considerably in 1997, Jack Williams, research and evaluation supervisor for the Montana Department of Transportation, said the figures may be misleading due to other factors. "The first year (of the law), fatalities went down by 18. It's hard to explain really," Williams said. "This year there have been more alcoholrelated fatalities." Additionally, injuries caused by auto accidents have held steady since the state lifted the speed limit, Williams said.

Since the law was enacted, average highway speed has crept up by 3 to 4 miles per hour in Montana. However, it's not Montanans who are driving the fastest in the state, Williams said.

The Department of Transportation did a radar study and found a sizeable difference in the speeds of out-ofstate motorists and residents. The catch in the "no daytime limit law" is that motorists must drive in a reasonable and prudent manner. Williams said this may be a reason for the dif-

"(The difference) was quite considerable," Williams said. "Washington was the worst and Alberta was also fairly high. Part of that is out-of-state drivers don't understand 'reasonable and prudent."

According to a study headed by Carl Fors, president of Speed Labs in Fort Worth, Texas, out-of-state motorists averaged 74.6 mph and Canadian motorists averaged 77.5 mph, while Montanans averaged 73.1 mph.

Of all states, only North Dakotans drive slower in Montana than do Montanans, Goke said.

Another concern deals with the number of motorists driving in pace with traffic since the daytime limit

"In 1996, the percentage of vehicles driving in pace with traffic dropped from 56 percent to 42 percent," Goke According to Goke, the percentage continues to drop and may pose a more serious problem than if people were just driving faster. Lifting the limit has also raised the number of people driving at excessive speeds who are not familiar with the roads, Goke said.

his company promotes an anti-Christian agenda "ridiculous" and said a boycott by Southern Baptists hasn't shaken Disney's bottom line.

"It hasn't had a financial effect," Eisner said in an interview to air on "60 Minutes" this Sunday. Portions of the interview were made available Wednesday.

Protestant denomination voted in May to organize a boycott against Disney's "anti-Christian and antifamily direction."

"That's ridiculous. We're not pushing any agenda," Eisner told CBS' Lesley Stahl.

The Baptists were angry about Disney's policy of giving health benefits to same-sex partners of employees, allowing "Gay Days" at its theme parks and permitting the star of the ABC show "Ellen" to come with the historical character's conversion to Christianity.

"When somebody says Pocahontas is anti-Christian or anti-Jewish or anti-black or anti-Native American, I say inside deep down, 'They're nuts.' They really are," the Disney chair said.

"She didn't become a Christian in Leaders of the 15 million-member the legend until after our story ended," he said. "(Pocahontas) is one of the most pro-social movies made in the 75 years of the history of the Disney Company."

As for "Ellen," Eisner said he thought the show's homosexual story line has been very well done. He said a recent advisory placed at the beginning of an "Ellen" episode where the star, Ellen DeGeneres, kisses another woman was in no way a response to the boycott. Eisner said the advisory was used said spokesman Dwayne Hastings.

Netanyahu expected to be cleared

JERUSALEM — A commission investigating Israel's botched assassination of a Hamas leader in Jordan is expected to exonerate Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, an Israeli newspaper said Wednesday.

In its interim report, to be submitted within two weeks, the panel will place much of the blame for the Sept. 25 operation on Mossad chief Danny Yatom and other senior officials in the spy agency, the Haaretz newspaper

Both Netanyahu and Yatom testified before the commission.

The attempt to kill Hamas political leader Khalid Mashaal triggered a scandal that strained Israel's ties with Jordan, its closest friend in the Arab world, and forced Netanyahu to release Hamas founder Ahmed Yassin in a prisoner swap.

Netanyahu was widely criticized for ordering the assassination which, even if successful, was sure to hurt relations with Jordan.

Israel's armed forces chief of staff and the head of the Shin Bet security services have said they were not consulted when the Mossad planned the attack on Mashaal.

The panel, which was appointed by the government, has itself been contro-

Candy gets first grader suspended

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — A 6-year-old boy has been suspended for half a day for bringing "drugs" to school — lemon drops bought in a health food store.

The fire department and an ambulance were called after a teacher found first-grader Seamus Morris giving the candies to a fellow pupil on the playground Oct. 29, said his mother, Shana Morris. She said both boys' parents were urged to take their children to the hospital for tests, despite her assurances that the lemon drops were harmless.

John Bushey, an administrator at Taylor Elementary School, said the halfday suspension was consistent with the district's drug policy, which treats unfamiliar products as controlled substances.

In Wednesday's edition of The Denver Post, Morris said, "I can't believe these people are educating our kids.'

Baby found as police clear building

AUBURN, Wash. — A 14-month-old boy found by police who were clearing out a burning building is believed to have been left alone for five days without food or water.

The toddler's mother, LaDawn Jump, 21, was charged Tuesday with second-degree child abandonment. Court papers said her son, Damon, was found Thursday with an ulcerated thumb.

"The doctor believes this was likely because the child had nothing but his thumb to eat," prosecutors said.

Doctors said Damon weighed 16 pounds, 4 ounces — four ounces less than when he had heart surgery in May. He was born with a severe heart

Court documents said Jump had been living with a new boyfriend and feared he would be scared away by the boy. So she checked on the boy every few days, leaving him peanut butter and jelly sandwiches or cheese to eat, prosecutors said.

Proposed ordinance to require City officials to record donations

By NANCY DONG Universe Staff Writer

Campaign financing was a main topic Tuesday night at the Provo Municipal Council Study meeting. Board members debated about a new ordinance that would require any political committee to record all donations with the city recorder. One of the ideas behind this new proposed ordinance would be to hold city officials accountable for any funds that they have received so the donations would be public.

Council member Mark G. Hathaway

is proposing this new ordinance. "My intent is to bring out on the table, in the light of day, any political financing. Let the citizens of Provo see what is going on," Hathaway said.

Another goal of the ordinance would be to expose any anonymous advertisements or allegations during campaigns. An example of this anonymous campaigning took place in the last mayoral race in the Ethics 4 Provo ads that made claims about board.

Lewis Billings.

Billings, who won the race, still doesn't know who was behind the

"This council needs to look at this, so the same thing doesn't happen in the next election," Hathaway said.

Council member Sheri Holweg was the only one who voiced any opposition to the ordinance. She voiced concerns that the new ordinance would cause too much paperwork for the city recorders.

Salt Lake City already has an ordinance in place that requires any financing over zero to be recorded, in other words all donations must be recorded.

Provo has two years to decide on the ordinance that would require most or all donations to be put on the record.

The letter was written in April 1995 after Moore concluded McVeigh was probably responsible for the theft of 70 weapons from Moore's home, Moore said.

Moore and his girlfriend, Karen Anderson, have testified that weapons found in Nichols' home three days after the bombing were stolen from them.

Moore told jurors that he suspected McVeigh had a role in the Nov. 5, 1994, robbery and tried to lure McVeigh to his farm so he could confront him.

"Plan is to bring the country down and have a few more things happen,"

Moore said he wrote the letter in response to one he received from McVeigh in January 1995, offering to help find those responsible for the robbery. McVeigh told Moore he was convinced it was a "government job" and the only reason Moore wasn't killed was because the government wanted word to get out as a warning to patriot groups against stockpiling weapons.

The trial was to resume

Wednesday. McVeigh visited the Royal, Ark., ranch that Moore shared with his wife, Carol, and Anderson several times in 1993 and 1994.

Moore, 62, testified that the robbery was carried out by a masked gunman in camouflage gear who bound Moore's eyes and body with duct tape. Moore said he could not identify the gunman.

astronauts will release a solar observatory and retrieve it two days later, conduct a practice spacewalk that was canceled last year because of a stuck hatch, and grow plants and crystals.

The first experiment took place shortly

In a space shuttle first, Columbia flipped while zooming toward orbit at about Mach 13, or 13 times the speed of sound. The twist was designed to put the shuttle in radio contact with communication satellites, necessary because of the impending shutdown of NASA's Bermuda tracking station to save money.

"Have an international Thanksgiving and may the roll go your way," a launch controller told the crew moments before

Among those attending the launch was Ukrainian President Leonid Kuchma, who cheered on Columbia crewman Leonid Kadenyuk, the first from his aday flight, Columbia's country to fly on an American spacecraft.

It is NASA's eighth and final shuttle launch of 1997 and the 24th flight for NASA's oldest shuttle. NASA last flew eight missions in a single year in 1992. What makes it more impressive this time is that the shuttle program has less money and fewer people because of government budget cuts. "It was a great year. We had success on every one of them, so you can't end the year on a better note than that," Harrington said.

Shuttle managers, eager to fly even more missions per year, attribute this year's achievements to better-than-ever efficiency. Of the seven previous shuttle launches this year, five went off at the exact second as planned. One was delayed 12 minutes, the other one day. All in all, it's one of NASA's best showings ever, even though one mission was cut short by fuel-cell trouble and had to be reflown by

The highlight of this mission, due to end Dec. 5, almost certainly will be the spacewalk.

Monday, NASA astronaut Winston Scott and Japanese astronaut Takao Doi will float out into the open cargo bay to test an extendible crane and other equipment to be used on the future international space station.

BYU-Utah, rivalry, swerve

A nation's power in the realm of international politics is its ability to get others (nations) to do what it wants.

Similarly a football team's power is its ability to get opposing teams to do what it wants: score fewer points, run screaming from the field, that sort of thing.

Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Cougar Stadium an intrusive show of force will establish the preeminent football powerhouse in Utah. At least that's the hype. More accurately the game will decide which Utah team stinks less.

When "rivalry" is mentioned this week in connection with college football most will think of Michigan vs. Ohio State, a game with national championship implications. So why didn't you hear about the Michigan game until you just read about it?

Easy, you're in Utah, and the BYU-Utah game is all that matters.

If you've read Scott Bell's article on page 9, you know about BYU's domination of the series in the LaVell Edwards era (and if not, shame on you, go read it right after you finish this). But an anomaly has occurred in the past four years: Utah is 3-1 against the Cougars in that time.

This random losing to Utah can be explained by examining the work of the ancient Greek philosopher Epicurus. Epicurus believed that life usually proceeds in a logical, straight way, but occasionally the atoms that make up existence "swerve," causing abnormal results. This is obviously what happened in those three BYU losses to Utah.

The "swerve" was also clearly responsible for the Jaron Dabney fumbles, the UTEP and Rice losses, the Fiesta Bowl dissing us last year, and the sub-par performance of this year's football team.

Of course Utah's sorry team is an example of the normal state of their program. Okay, that may be faulty logic, and a bit biased, and it has nothing to do with international politics, or the Michigan game. The fact of the matter is this year has been a bit of an anomaly for our football team. They are used to winning, and so are the fans. The game means nothing on the national scene, and the winner will only own bragging rights. But the show of force, the battle for pride and power, and the fact that we all still care about it, says much. Life is all about the "swerve," the fact that anything can happen. If the Cougars lose terribly Saturday you will not lose your job, nobody will starve and world economic markets will probably remain stable.

But we will still be stooped on the edge of our seats, hanging on every pass, and screaming our guts out during the game. Logic, truth, order, and BYU may prevail, or things could swerve to Utah. Either way, we'll forget about our jobs, world starvation, and the Dow Jones for a few hours and focus on something really important.

Is true pleasure BYU possessing power over Utah?

Eeh, maybe, maybe not. Either way, even if our rivalry isn't the most important, it allows us a time to escape. That's why we love it. Go Cougars.

Stop toying with Barbie

Today I am writing on something that I really don't know a whole lot about. I know, I know, so what else is new?

decided to change the shape and image of its beloved doll Barbie. Apparently, the new and improved Barbie will feature a wider waist, slimmer hips and, as The Wall Street Journal says, "a reduction of her legendary bustline." Legendary? Usually when I hear that word, I have images of John Wayne, Jackie Robinson or maybe Homer Simpson, but certainly not Barbie's chest.

They say if the current Barbie was blown up to a 5-foot-8 person, her dimensions would be 38-18-34. Some ladies in the else would want to study. Thanks to TV newsroom were going off about how it is physically impossible for a woman to be in the sun. Today we have with us Jon built that way - she wouldn't even be Mano, an expert on people who have acciable to stand up.

My question is, why would people even project Barbie into life-size dimensions? We don't hold other toys up to such standards. Take Mr. Potatohead, for example. If he were 5-foot-8, his nose would weigh 23 pounds, his ears would be the size of parachutes and his body would be composed of one giant, brown 294-pound potato! The man's a freak! Why, it's physically impossible for a potato to be built like that. With his ears catching all that wind-drag, there's no way he could stand up, except I guess his feet would be 5 feet long. Plus, when was the last time you saw a potato with facial Obviously, Barbie is not built like a reallife human being — her head pops off too easily. Real people's heads don't do that have you ever flicked your thumb and had someone's head go rolling off? The next time you visit a family with a young daughter, check out her Barbies. If she has a brother under the age of, oh, about 23, chances are good at least half of her dolls will be doing their rendition of "The Night of the Living Dead," (a great flick by the

And you thought BYU was funny because students held a protest about naked statues.

On CNN's hard-hitting talk show, "TalkBack Live," Barbie experts led the discussion of the latest changes. That's right, there are actually people who have studied Barbie enough to become experts. Barbie. He said: "Barbie is the Mercedes of dolls. You do not take a Mercedes and turn it into a Chevette." If that statement isn't evidence for why boys shouldn't play with dolls, I don't know what is.

What people might want to remember is Barbie is a doll. She is not an "American icon" as some people keep saying. She is not America — she is a toy. She's a $2 billion revenue-producing toy, and the most important part of that phrase is "$2 billion." Mattel is not doing this for social or political reasons, it is simply for the money. OK, so maybe that greed does qualify Barbie as an American icon.

In the end, it's apparent that Barbie has learned that at times less is more. Someone might want to mention that to Pamela Anderson Lee.

Prevent vandalism from U

Andrew Smith Laie, Hawaii

Well, it's that time of year again. Yes, we're all gearing up for that famed football rivalry where BYU and the U of U battle it out on the gridiron. With this game comes a lot of tradition. It happens each and every year. No, I'm not referring to the football game itself, I'm talking about the vandalism.

Imagine my surprise last night when I turned on the T.V. to watch the evening news. Somehow, a few over-zealous "fans" from the U of U managed to sneak past BYU's rigid lines of defense and once again "redecorate" the cougar statue in front of the stadium. Surprise? It was more like disgust. How could this happen? Did BYU get a new Chief-of-Police who was simply taken by surprise? Did the administration, the grounds crew, or the ROTC simply forget to mark the game on their calendars?

You'd think we would be prepared. Why not organize a crew to watch the statues/monuments a week or so BEFORE the game? The costs couldn't be more than the repair bills each year. We might even catch a delinquent frat-boy or two. If this isn't feasible, let's think of something. We're supposed to be a University full of fairly clever individuals.

It's often been said "A word to the wise is sufficient." How about many years of experience? That should count for something. If past performance is any indication of future returns, we can all look forward to many happy years of vandalism and humiliation.

Professors cut students slack

Abe Sancher Milford, Conn.

I am writing this letter in regard to the yearly appearance of wrecked cars strewn over the BYU campus during the Thanksgiving week. Every year, one can find a Suzuki, or some other small car that looks like it was hit by a Semi-Tractor trailer truck. The point of displaying these cars on campus is to remind us to drive safely, and to not fall asleep at the wheel. This is precisely what I wish to discuss.

Thanksgiving has been held traditionally as a holiday in which family comes together, eats a big dinner, etc. Unfortunately, most of the insecure BYU professors who teach a class which takes no brainwork to pass seem to think that it is appropriate to assign tests, and/or homework that is due precisely that day. It is inexcusable to turn in anything early or late, and failure to comply means a significant reduction in the final grade. These professors remind me of the religion professors that seem to feel that it is more important for a student to attend their class to the final minute than it is for them to go ·hear the prophet of the Lord speak in a devotional. Come on, professors; let's grow up a little. We enjoy your classes; we want to earn our merit. Why must you all insist on keeping us on campus until Wednesday evening, forcing us to drive through the wilderness in the fury of winter? Why can we not get an extension, or complete our assignments early. Are you that inse-On the show cure? My intention is not to offend the profesthere was a male mem-sors, but let them look with a different attitude. They have their family close by to share this holiday. Many of us come from far away. Please grant us a special provision in which we can complete our obligations as students while allowing you, as our teachers, to demand from us that which is necessary.

Line etiquette

Alex Longoria Phoenix, Ariz.

My wife and I awoke at 4:45 a.m. Saturday morning. We were off for our weekend's adventure, waiting in line at the Varsity Theater.

First we had to wait in the cold until the Wilkinson Center opened at 6 a.m., then we formed the line, which grew quickly. By 6:06 a.m. the line had turned the first corner and was heading south toward the ballrooms. By 7 a.m. the line was heading west toward the Cougareat.

I do not write this so others may admire me, rather to show how early some of us woke up, and to tell what happened next.

Around 11 a.m. a large blonde woman approached the two daughters of a family that had arrived earlier. She offered five dollars if they bought her two tickets ($1.50 each), and let them keep the change. Shame on her. How could she girls to return the money.

Why? Because I'm bitter and selfish? No, because if that woman had been allowed to pay those girls to buy her tickets, then two tickets would be purchased out of turn, before those who were already waiting even had a chance. But she wasn't the only one.

take advantage of children that way? I asked the

From then until noon, there was a continuous stream of these "vultures" looking to see if someone would sell their honesty and rob the people who had arrived three and a half hours earlier.

It was a really good movie, Air Force One. I think it was even worth the six and a half hour wait. But I was lucky, because I was first in line. So the next time you're in line for the Varsity Theater, ask yourself if someone ahead of you is selling or giving your tickets to someone else who isn't in line at all.

Editor's note: the Varsity Theater's policy has changed and now limits ticket purchases to six per person.

Bring back Varsity II

Wayne Woodfield Mapleton

When Air Force One came to the Varsity, asked a date out for Thursday to see it. Last time I asked someone out to a show at the Varsity, it ended up selling out, and we had to go elsewhere. So this time, I arrived about half an hour before the ticket office opened just to make doubly sure that I got the tickets. I arrived only to find that the line wound around the Wilkinson Center, down the hallway by the elevators, and almost got outside of the south doors before it finally ended! When the ticket booth finally opened, the tickets sold quickly, and the booth wasn't even in sight before word got back to us that all shows were

How often will you show me up, Varsity? The days when I could conveniently get tickets to a weeknight movie are gone. Are your movies only for those who sleep out on the Wilkinson Center lawn? The obvious solution: Bring back Varsity II. Why was it discontinued in the first place? I was told that it just wasn't making enough money." I suppose that's understandable considering the quality of the movies they showed there. Now, I'm no economics major, but there were enough people in line in front of me today to fill the Varsity theater four times. Take my buck fifty! The difficulty of obtaining tickets to most any movie at the Varsity has escalated to a ridiculous level. Give students some alternative to wasting the morning in line. Re-open Varsity II and show those movies that are selling out at Varsity I. You'll have my business.

Devotional hour ... and a half

Lara Saville Topeka, Kan.

I would like to lodge a complaint with the BYU Devotional Hour. All businesses and offices shut down from 10:45 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. on Tuesdays for the Devotional hour. However, students have classes until 10:50 a.m. and then classes again at 12 p.m. Why is it then that half of campus is closed for an additional twenty minutes while we as students are required to be back in classes by 12 p.m. and barely have enough time to make it to the devotional at 11 a.m. Do the employees in the businesses and offices even go to the devotional? Do they walk slower? Why the extra time?

The study also challenges the wisdom that the less total fat people eat, the better off they are. Instead, people might be better off forgoing some carbohydrates and instead substituting monounsaturated or polyunsaturated fats. This could mean putting olive oil on a salad but eating it without bread to save the carbohydrate calories.

Whether fats harm or help the heart depends on what they do to blood levels of the two main kinds of cholesterol, HDL and LDL. Raising HDL is good, because this protects against heart disease, while raising LDL is bad, because this increases risk. Trans fat appears to be especially harmful because it raises the bad LDL while it lowers the good HDL. Saturated fat is also dangerous — but not quite so much as trans because it raises both HDL and LDL.

The other main kinds of fat — monounsaturated fat and non-hydrogenated polyunsaturated fat — are both good for the heart. Monounsaturated raises HDL while it lowers LDL, and polyunsaturated lowers LDL while leaving HDL unchanged.

Even if trans fat is the worst, saturated fat may still be a bigger health problem, since people eat so much more of it. The nurses studied got 2 percent of their total daily calories from trans fat, while 16 percent came from saturated fat.

Health experts emphasize that the new data do not mean that foods high in saturated fat are suddenly a healthy alternative. Indeed, some nutritionists may have been reluctant to acknowledge the hazards of trans fats because of fear that people would simply switch from margarine and shortening to butter and lard.

"The real important message is people should decrease their intake of saturated fat and trans fat, period. No one recommends either butter or stick margarine at this point," said Dr. Alice H. Lichtenstein of the U.S. Department of Agriculture nutrition center at Tufts University in Boston.

The food industry has already begun to change its products, at least in part in response to worries about trans fats. Sue Taylor, a dietitian at the National Association of Margarine Manufacturers, said 60 percent of spreads now are the soft tub or squeeze bottle types. These contain little or no trans fat.

Further, even the stick spreads are likely to be reduced-fat "vegetable oil spreads" rather than true margarine, which, like butter, must be 80 percent fat. These also generally contain less trans fat.

IRS offers problem-solving day

By STEVE HALL Universe Staff Writer

Taxpayers are invited to a Problem Solving Day Dec. 5, 1997, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the IRS Salt Lake City office, 50 S. 200 East, Salt Lake

"We want to reach out to taxpayers who have been unable to resolve. Taxpayers who are unable to come ordinary channels. their problems," said District Director Wally Hutton in a news release. "We encourage taxpayers to call ahead and make an appointment so that we can be sure to assist them in the most efficient and convenient way possible."

Interested taxpayers should call 1-800-829-1040 or 799-6600 (for the metro Salt Lake City area) to schedule an appointment. Kathryn Gregg, of the IRS Rocky Mountain District, said scheduling an appointment promptly with an IRS tax professional will expedite the problemsolving process.

"Calling ahead and letting us know your particular situation will speed up the whole process," Gregg said. "In fact, in Denver last week, we resolved 30 percent of the problems over the phone. Also, notifying us in advance lets us make sure we send the personnel the taxpayer needs to resolve the issue."

Employees from the Utah State Tax Commission will also be available to help with issues involving state taxes. Taxpayers should bring any relevant documentation or correspondence which will help resolve their tax problem.

Men's basketball team annihilated by WSU

By DAVID FUHRIMAN Universe Sports Writer

Just minutes after the game, BYU basketball head coach Steve Cleveland took a deep breath, gathered his thoughts and said, "Well, you just witnessed an oldfashioned whuppin' there."

After a 78-49 defeat at the hands of Washington State, maybe Cosmo should have sent some of those Frontier pies he was giving away down to the BYU locker room, because the first home loss of the season seemed to leave a bitter taste in the players' and coaches' mouths.

Cleveland was candid in his thoughts about the game. "It's really difficult to find anything real positive about our performance," he said. "It's almost easier right now to talk about Washington State than about BYU."

"We were in the ball game, but we just couldn't get our shots to fall."

-- Justin Weidauer

men's basketball team

The box score for BYU seems to speak for itself. BYU shot an anemic 29% from the field. including just 20% from beyond the three-point arch. Such ineffective shooting may be the biggest surprise of the game, considering BYU shot 53% from the field and almost 30% from three-point territory in its 14-point win last week against San Diego

The Cougars were actually ahead 11-4 early in the game, and were still in the game at the half when BYU was down nine points. But in the end, BYU's shooting touch betrayed the team.

"We were in the ball game, but we just couldn't get our shots to fall," senior forward Justin Weidauer said. "We came out in the second half and made two or three turnovers in a row, and that cost us."

Just two minutes into the second half, Washington State had already distanced itself from BYU, eventually building a 21point lead with 15 minutes left in the game. But the 9,279 fans in attendance got to their feet and helped the Cougars battle back to within 12 points. Weidauer scored five of his eight points within a minute, scoring on a jumper and then draining a three-pointer while drawing a foul.

Cleveland felt that the crowd was the sweetest part of the night. "The best part of the night was that there were people in the stands that were going crazy, and I want this community to know how much I as a coach and we as a team appreciate that," Cleveland said. "There was a time in the second half when we cut the lead down to 12 or so, and the crowd had a lot to do with that."

Despite the crowd's enthusiasm and the team's frantic attempts to battle back, Washington State's shooting and defense was too much for BYU WSU shot 50% from the field, including a sizzling 62% from the three-point line.

"I think we kind of freaked out," sophomore center Bret Jepsen said. "We would run our stuff and we would have our shots, but we wouldn't feel comfortable shooting. We shot terrible tonight, and I think after a while we just assumed the shots wouldn't fall, and it got to us

Jepsen was one of the few bright spots for BYU, shooting 5 for 7 from the field, and finishing with 12 points and six rebounds. Freshman forward Mekeli Wesley got a double-double on the night, scoring 10 points and pulling down 10 rebounds.

However, Washington State sophomore forward Chris Crosby had a ridiculously hot shooting night, hitting five of six three-pointers and finishing with 21 points.

Cleveland refused to relinquish an optimistic view of the rest of the season, and stressed the importance of playing well against the University of Oregon Friday night.

"I'll tell you what, you come to practice tomorrow and you will not see us hanging our heads," Cleveland said. "It's too long a season for that. I'm very disappointed, but I'm not discouraged, and I'm not going to get discouraged."

GOING UP STRONG: BYU forward Justin Weidauer takes it up and under a Washington State defender during Wednesday's loss at the Marriott Center. The Cougars ran out of luck, losing 78-49.

Men's soccer kicks off championship tourney

By DAVID FUHRIMAN Universe Sports Writer

In preparation for the upcoming national club championships, the BYU men's soccer team spent its last practice intensively reviewing the skills and strategy of ... kickball?

"It's a team tradition that we have a kickball game at the last practice of the year," head coach Chris Watkins said. But the game was also an indication of how comfortable the players are with each other and with their chances of coming home with their second straight national club championship.

"We just feel like we can win it all and we'll be disappointed if we don't," junior midfielder Jeremy Bailey said. "I think we have a really good chance. If we go down there and play well as a team, we should come back with a victory." "We feel like we're at the top of just as competitive as last year's our game right now," sophomore defender Nathan Morris said. "We

"I think our main strength is our team defense," Bailey said. "When we play well defensively as a team is when we look the strongest." Morris echoed Bailey's comments. "It'll be different without Dax back there, but I think our defense will still be solid."

Some of the most competitive teams at the tournament will be the University of Texas, Penn State, North Carolina and Texas A&M. BYU's first opponent will be Texas A&M, a team that beat last year's runner-up, Baylor, in this year's regional tournament.

Cleveland recruiting coup scores four new guards

By MATTHEW PRIBYL Universe Sports Writer

With the Cougar men's basketball team already off to a promising start, the news just got a little better with the addition of four new guards that will join this year's team as a result of the early November NCAA signing peri-

Those players include Ron Selleaze, a 6-6, 210, junior from Oakland, Calif., Mike Garrett, a 6-2, 187, sophomore from Santa Barbara, Calif., Mark Bigelow, a 6-6, 190, freshman from Olympia, Wash., and Daniel Bobick, a 6-6, 185, freshman from Newbury

"This is a major step in the right direction," said first-year BYU coach Steve Cleveland. "This is our first recruiting class and they can all play 94 feet of basketball. They represent the type of perimeter players we want at BYU."

Selleaze has signed a scholarship commitment and, according to Cleveland, will join the Cougars after completing his AA requirements at Fresno City College and will most likely join the team Dec. 19. Cleveland has much praise for the ability and talent that Selleaze will bring to the team.

"I have never coached a player who has competed with such intensity as Ron has on every possession," he said. Last season, Selleaze averaged 16 lie ahead with great optimism.

Garrett, who averaged 14 points and three rebounds last season, is also a product from Fresno City College who will look to help the team this season on the perimeter. "Mike is a most outstanding perimeter defender and excellent three-point shooter," Cleveland said.

Garrett was also instrumental in his team's success last year at Fresno where took over for Rafer Alston (now at Fresno State) to go 6-0 at the midseason mark and on to winning the Central Valley Conference championship.

Bigelow, a product of Washington, averaged 20 points, eight rebounds and and four assists for Olympia High School last season. "He has the ability to put the ball on the floor and shoot the three," Cleveland said. "He plays within himself, moves well without the ball and has a great feel for the game. He is a combination 1-2 guard. He is a very athletic, versatile player who is in constant motion."

With the addition of an even stronger arsenal of players, the Cougars are looking forward to the challenges that

BYU racquetball team swar Ricks College over week

By DAVID FUHRIMAN Universe Sports Writer

The BYU racquetball team continued its dominance of other college teams, sweeping Ricks College in a weekend dual meet in the Richards Building.

In fact, dominance may be too soft a word for what the BYU squad displayed on Saturday — the Cougars didn't even allow a set in 11 matches they played against the Vikings, even though four of the top women's players and two of the top men's players didn't compete.

Despite the whipping Ricks took on the court, it sounded more like an amicable picnic between friends than a hard-fought, competitive meet. "It was nice of Ricks to come down and make the trip to play," head racquetball coach Dennis Fisher said. "After the real matches we played some mixed doubles and other games and just had a good

In Edwards' era, BYU has outscored Utah 922-514, or by just more than 58 touchdowns. That's an average victory of 36.9 to 20.6.

Of course, Utah's three-year breakthrough from 1993 to 1995 brought the series as close to parity as it ever has been. The Utes scored 34, now a cursed number for Cougar faithful, in each victory to make it all the more galling. The universe was restored to its proper order, at least for BYU fans, when BYU's fifth-ranked powerhouse crushed Utah 37-17 last season.

The rivalry has produced more than its fair share of lasting memories, both good and bad.

First-year Utah coach Wayne Howard discovered in 1977 how bitter things are. At the end of a 38-8 BYU whipping, Edwards put starter Marc Wilson back in the game to break a passing record.

With Wilson in, BYU scored a late touchdown to run up the score. After the game, reporters overheard Howard yell that he hated Edwards and he hated BYU. Those comments made papers everywhere, heating the rivalry ber works on one of eight American A-10 Thunderbolt attack planes which protected the emirate from any Iraqi threat in 1994. Today the Kuwaitis are in opposition to the use of U.S. force against Iraq.

More recently, Chris Yergensen's 55yard field goal in 1993 is forever ingrained in the fabric of the rivalry. It gave the Utes a 34-31 win and sparked a wild Utah celebration.

FIT TO FIGHT: A crew mem-

Washington its full support. France and Russia have a stake in seeing sanctions lifted: their oil deals with Iraq. And nearly all Arab countries shudder at the idea of the United States launching another attack on Iraq, an overreaction they believe would prove futile.

But nothing better demonstrates the unpopularity of Washington's moves toward military action than the public opposition of Kuwait.

Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait in 1990 and during a seven-month occupation systematically looted the country — plundering medical equipment, printing presses and even street lights. An estimated 300 Kuwaitis died. Hundreds of others were rounded up — and Kuwait claims they still are being held in Iraqi jails, a charge Iraq denies.

Given that history, there was surprise last weekend when Foreign Minister Sabah al-Ahmed al-Sabah declared that Kuwait opposes any military action against Iraq. The Kuwaiti Cabinet also urged a ce led in the Gulf diplomatic solution "so that the region could be spared the dangers only so far. The great majority of process, and yet the United States quickly added that its views were "identical" to those of Washington.

The message, however, was clear. Whatever Kuwaitis owe the United States for ending Iraq's occupation, more and more are willing to speak out against Washington's policies, while drawing a clear line between Saddam and the Iraqi people.

"Everyone wants diplomacy," said Faraj Mahfouth, a 30-year-old Kuwaiti in the well-to-do neighborhood of Salmiya. "It's not the people of Iraq, it's their leaders. And if we use force, who will be the victim? It will be the people."

In addition to the conspiracy theories, there is a sense that Saddam has actually benefited from past U.S. strikes, casting himself as a victim of aggression to the rest of the Arab world. That grates on Kuwaitis, who still revile him as a butcher.

"The use of force has ended up strengthening the Iraqi regime rather than weakening it," said Hasan Jowhar, a Kuwaiti legislator.

Even after listing a litany of complaints about U.S. policy in the region, Naser al-Sane, another lawmaker, still praised Kuwait's "spe-

Nevertheless, Kuwaitis find distasteful Washington's fervent support for Israel, mirroring the growing anger across the Arab world at what many consider Washington's refusal to pressure Israel into compromises in the deadlocked Middle

That resentment is fed by frustration and disillusionment among Arabs, who see themselves as too weak and lacking in unity to do anything about it. Not surprisingly, the anger has grown as they witness Washington's resolve in dealing with Iraq.

U.S. lawyer takes post on war crimes tribunal

Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — A former U.S. civil rights lawyer took over the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal Wednesday, pledging to build new ties with the Balkan leaders who often hinder the U.N. court.

Gabrielle Kirk McDonald, a 55year-old former law professor and federal judge in Texas, was elected president of the court that was set up to bring those who committed wartime appointes to justice.

McDonald said she plans to visit Belgrade, Sarajevo and Zagreb to forge "a fresh relationship" with Serb, Croat and Bosnian leaders and encourage them to cooperate with the court. No dates have been set.

Serb authorities in particular repeatedly have stymied the tribunal and refuse to turn over suspects, including the two most wanted men: former Karadzic and his military chief during criminal court. Ratko Mladic.

"I will approach it in a way of telling them the benefits, and hope I can achieve cooperation that way,' McDonald said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The benefits, she said, are simple: Without justice, there can be no lasting peace.

McDonald, born in St. Paul, Minn., has served four years on The Haguebased court. She headed the threejudge panel that jailed Bosnian Serb war criminal Dusan Tadic for 20 years in July.

Outgoing president Antonio Cassese recommended her as his successor and McDonald was the overwhelming choice of her fellow tribunal judges. She will serve a two-year term as court president.

president. He will remain on the court as a judge.

As president, McDonald will head the five-judge appeals chamber, the court's highest judicial body, and travel the world encouraging support for the tribunal.

Before joining the tribunal in 1993. McDonald spent 10 years as a federal judge in Houston, becoming the first black woman to serve on a federal bench in Texas.

She also was a lawyer with the NAACP's Legal and Educational Fund and a law professor at several American law schools.

The Yugoslav war crimes tribunal has indicted 77 suspected war criminals but has just 20 in custody. McDonald wants to improve on that record and ensure the temporary court makes a lasting impression.

The also plans to streamline the tribunal's structure to speed up trials and Bosnian Serb leader Radovan pash for a permanent international

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Albright had not been informed in advance about the Russian proposal.

As she arrived in Cairo from New Delhi for a refueling stop, she told reporters, "Iraq must let the weapons inspectors get back to their vital work of preventing Iraq from building nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, and it must permit those inspections to proceed without interference or conditions."

Albright cut short a trip to India - she already had canceled a stop in Bangladesh — to attend the Geneva meeting.

By all accounts, the Iraqi overtures that attracted Moscow involve reducing the percentage of American inspectors in the U.N. weapons groups, committing the security council to declaring that the searches are unbiased and reaffirming that Iraqi cooperation would lead to a lifting of economic sanctions that have severely damaged the country's economy.

Congratulations to TIFFANY LOTT, Honda Award Nominee.

{ Now that's going to look great on a resumé. }

Every year, the Honda Awards Program recognizes the top collegiate women athletes in each of eleven NCAA sports. While you may recall hearing about the thirteen 1996-97 winners of this award, you may not have known about your school's other nominees. They are also at the top of their individual sports, and provide inspiration and motivation to other female athletes all over the country. For this distinction, a $1,000 donation will be made to the general scholarship fund of each of their schools. And this should most likely add to an already impressive performance record.
